Course Introduction

In today's competitive industrial market, the scope and significance of negotiation can involve intense, high-stakes interactions revolving around a series of complex issues affecting multiple parties. When facing these situations, negotiators need highly developed negotiation skills and strategies to guide them through the intensive five-step process that is often the difference between getting what you want and settling for what the other side will give you.

This training course is designed to help participants build the skills necessary to facilitate a collaborative negotiation that leaves both their own firm and the supplier organization victorious.
