Sustainability and Corporate Social Responsibility in Legal Practice

Course Introduction

In today's dynamic business landscape, sustainability and corporate social responsibility (CSR) have become integral components of corporate governance.

BOOST's course explores the role of legal professionals in navigating the intersection of sustainability, CSR, and legal frameworks. Participants will gain insights into the legal mechanisms supporting corporate sustainability, including environmental law, labor laws, and human rights considerations, and how these align with global sustainability standards and CSR initiatives.

The course covers the legal compliance aspects of CSR, environmental impact assessments, greenwashing, and emerging trends in ESG (Environmental, Social, and Governance) reporting. Legal professionals will learn how to advise businesses on ethical decision-making, mitigate legal risks related to CSR, and ensure compliance with sustainability regulations.

By the end of the course, participants will have the tools to help businesses implement and enforce CSR policies, align legal strategies with environmental standards, and adapt to evolving trends in sustainability law.
