Strategic Government Relations for the Oil & Gas Sector

Course Introduction

In today's complex regulatory and geopolitical environment, effective government relations are no longer a complementary function; they are a critical driver of business sustainability and growth in the oil and gas industry. This highly interactive course from BOOST is designed to equip professionals with the knowledge and tools needed to engage strategically with government stakeholders, influence public policy, and protect their organization's long-term license to operate.

Participants will explore how to navigate regulatory frameworks, identify key political and institutional actors, and develop communication strategies that align corporate goals with national priorities. Through case studies, simulations, and practical frameworks, the course empowers participants to build collaborative, high-trust relationships with public entities that can impact operations, investment, and reputation.
